Bashing Bronze

Kamini Ezrałow shows what can be done with some metal and a dose of love

Leading international interior designer Kamini Ezrałow launched the first eight pieces of her inaugural furniture collection, Bronze, at the Salone Internazionale del Mobile in Milan last year. At this April's Salone, she showed the complete collection, launching eight further pieces to great acclaim. A collaboration with Italian family firm Orsi, Bronze is testament to traditional Italian craftsmanship and how well it translates into contemporary luxury. As a material, bronze represents longevity, classicism, tactility and elegance, and it is these connotations from which the designer took inspiration. It is now possible to see the collection virtually in its entirety at the L&CB showroom on Motcomb Street.

The Royal Chamber

Soft white linens, intricately painted wooden furniture and a cot more inviting than any standard four-poster: suite dreams are made of this. The Residents' Journal was thrilled to be invited on a tour just down the road around one of the Grosvenor Hotel's Premium Park View Suites, which has been transformed with the flick of the Dragons of Walton Street's magic wand. Bespoke nursery designers, the Dragons have created a bedroom fit for a prince or princess, with hand-painted furniture and thoughtful touches for busy families. Lucinda Croft, MD of Dragons of Walton Street, reveals that they own the copyright to hand-paint Beatrix Potter artwork onto the walls, an honour the company is very proud of. 'It is intrinsically British and timeless for a guest from overseas,' Lucinda explains. A three-night Buckingham package in the nursery suite starts at £6,270, and guests will be treated to a concierge service, a specially devised menu and a range of luxurious pampering activities.
