

Rose-Tinted Spectacles

Having built up a steady following in recent years, we thought it was high time designer Rose Uniacke laid down her roots in London. As though she read our minds, Uniacke has just launched her studio in nearby Pimlico. Made up of a series of neutral white rooms which ensure attention is drawn to the standout furniture, the studio is a refreshing contrast to the sometimes gaudy interiors of traditional antiques shops. Rose Uniacke also creates covetable fabric collections which include cashmere blankets and goatskin rugs.

With a knack for collecting antique furniture combined with a keen eye for designing contemporary pieces, the studio is a great place to visit if you're in the market for a rare antique or one-off piece.

*Rose Uniacke, 76-78 Pimlico Road, SW1W 8PL
roseuniacke.com*

Flowers in the Window

Whether you're a royalist or not, it's hard to resist the coronation bouquets from Royal Warrant holder and florist Moyses Stevens, which opened up shop in the borough just a couple of months ago. The Coronation Festival at Buckingham Palace takes place from 11-14 July but the flower gurus will be celebrating the entire month. With the red white and blue bouquet channelling the Union Jack, it helps if you're feeling patriotic (although we appreciate that's not always easy in the British summer).

*Moyses Stevens
118 Pavilion Road, SW3 2BF
moysesflowers.co.uk*

His and Hers

You can now do matching 'his and hers' in the study as well as the bathroom thanks to new designs from Edward Barnsley. The latest commissions from the designer-makers come in the form of two desks: one for a man, one for a woman. The 'Ski' desk has a distinctly masculine feel with its heavy mix of timbers and rich purple leather drawer lining, while the 'Red' desk is feminine in both name and nature with its refined red leather skiver and neat and tidy handle-less appearance.
barnsley-furniture.co.uk

The Bronze Age

During her childhood, Kamini Ezralow picked up influences from far and wide but these have since been translated into the universal language of interior design. The last two years have seen the designer opening her own studio, Ezralow Design and launching her first furniture collection entitled Bronze, which is in collaboration with Italian design house Orsi.

The furniture range is almost as well-travelled as the designer herself, having debuted in Milan last year before touching base at the L&B showroom this summer where it'll be possible to view it almost in its entirety for the first time.

*Bronze Collection, Ezralow Design, L&B, 6/7 Motcomb Street, SW1X 8JU
ezralowdesign.com*

Highly Sprung

Creating tailor-made products is something of a speciality for Bespoke Sofa. These luxurious statement chairs could be used as the starting point to theme an entire room. The studio offers a reupholstery service which could come in handy if your favourite armchair has seen better days of late.

*559 Kings Road, SW6 2EB
bespokesofalondon.co.uk*

